

MEETS DEATH IN AUTO CRASH

Alburn Steele, Mokena Killed When Motorcycle And Auto Driven by W. Homerding Crash

The intersection of 159th street and Route 51 south of Orland Park was the scene of a fatal motorcycle and automobile collision Thursday morning around seven o'clock in which one Mokena man was killed instantly and another man from the same town was seriously hurt.

Alburn Steele of Mokena who has been in the employ of the South Chicago Elevator Co. was riding to work on his motorcycle and was going east on 159th street. Walter Homerding also of Mokena was driving north on Route 51 in a Ford. Both were going at a high rate of speed and failed to see each other. The motorcycle hit the Ford and the impact was so great that the Ford turned over three times. The motor cycle ran over 200 feet after Mr. Steele was knocked off.

Both wrecked machines were taken to the Cooper & Hostert garage in Mokena.

The accident was witnessed by Mr. Demke residing on a farm close to the intersection of 159th & Route 51. Mr. Demke says both drivers were going at a high rate of speed and when the motor cycle and auto collided the auto rose up off the pavement and then turned over 3 times. Soon after the crash other cars came along and Mr. Steele was taken to the office of Dr. W. R. Schussler in Orland Park, but was dead when taken into the office. His skull had been crushed. Homerding suffered a number of serious cuts on his arms and his back was injured. He was rushed to the office of Dr. W. V. Hedges at Frankfort by a passing motorist and was later taken to the Silver Cross hospital at Joliet.

Mr. Steele is survived by his widow.

Funeral services for Mr. Steele will be held this Saturday afternoon at 1:30 p. m. daylight saving time or 12:30 standard time at the West End Funeral Home in Chicago Heights with burial in Rosehill cemetery, Chicago.

Will County Taxpayers Seek Decrease of County Officers Salaries

A Will county taxpayers committee has been formed with the purpose of having the county taxing bodies curtail expenses. The county board is now in session and members of the board have been called upon to reduce the pay of county appointive officers and to strike all "unnecessary offices" from the pay roll and a communication to this effect was sent to the board by the county taxpayers organization headed by Homer Grommon and Healy N. Alexander. The communication was read at the board meeting Tuesday, was received and placed on file. A detailed report of the communication will be printed next week.

WILL COUNTY ASSESSED VALUATIONS ARE GIVEN BIG CUT

After hearing hundreds of Will County farmers and city property owners regarding a cut in the assessed valuations of farm, city and village property, the Will County Board of Review has granted a cut of 25 per cent in the assessed valuation of all farm property in Will County and a cut of 15 per cent on all lots in cities and villages in Will County.

The cuts were announced at a meeting of the Board of Review last Friday morning. D. H. Lentz, chairman of the Board of Review states that the board has gone the limit and that they have given the people all of the reduction that they possibly can at this time while still guarding Will County from any reaction on the part of the Illinois Tax Commission.

Orland Labor Day Parade A Great Success

Well Orland Park did it again! Yes, Siree, those Orland Park firemen under the leadership of their very efficient chief, John Helenhouse put on a Labor Day celebration that went over with a BANG!

The line of parade in which appeared many gorgeously decorated floats formed on the Southwest highway approach right off 143rd street in the village. Headed by the Orland Park Community band, the Orland Park Legion Post and the fire departments of Orland Park, Lemont and Spring Forest, the parade over half a mile long marched down the principal streets of the village, thru the subdivisions and on down 143rd street to the Forest Preserve west of the Orland Park school. Here the parade disbanded. Hundreds of people lined the streets and the preserve was thronged after the parade. The Orland Park band put on a concert. There were all kinds of games.

A giant tug-of-war between Wm. Newcomb and his gang and Wm. Kollmann and his gang resulted in Mr. Kollmann's gang winning out.

Next came the catching of the greased pig. In this contest Tom Cooper was the winner. Mr. Cooper caught the porker and placed him into the crate from which he had been released, all in a minute's time. Mr. Cooper proved his laurels as a champion hog catcher.

The parade was viewed by judges stationed in a special stand along 143rd street. The judges awarded the following cash prizes donated by the Orland Park Fire Department:

For best decorated floats, 1st T. H. Davidson, $15 cash. 2nd prize—Clarence E. Beagley, $10.

3rd prize—J. F. Schmaderke, $5. 4th prize—L. N. R. Beatty Lumber Co., $2.50.

Special pony prizes—$1 each to Chester McCauley and Wm. Davidson. $5 in cash was also paid to each fire chief of the visiting fire departments of Lemont, and Spring Forest.

The Tinley Park Royal Neighbors also had a prettily decorated float in the parade.

The judges were: Joseph Creer, Orland; Carl J. Bornet, Tinley Park and Herbert Hildebrandt of Worth.

The floats that won the 1st, 2nd and 3rd prizes were decorated by Mr. W. H. Thomas of Orland Park.

Clowns, Amos and Andy were also features of the parade. In the evening over 1500 people attended the dance given by the firemen on an open air dance floor in the Forest Preserve. Chuck Formento and his orchestra furnished the music.

Chief Helenhouse of the Orland Fire Department wishes to express his appreciation to everyone who helped in any way to make the parade and celebration the whole of a success which it was. On the other hand much credit is due the Orland Fire Department and their chief for sponsoring the event.

ROSE CHAPTER GARDEN CLUB NOTES

Mrs. H. D. Robbins, Pub. Chairman

The September meeting of the Rose Chapter Garden Club met at the home of Mrs. M. Schultz. Regardless of the weather there was a good attendance.

The guest speaker for the evening was Mrs. Smith from the Phoenix Farm at Oak Forest Ridge. She gave a wonderful talk on peonies.

A tasty lunch was served with hot coffee.

A few members of the garden club surprised Mrs. Chas. Deever at her home last Saturday night to pay a visit to our new member Mary Kathryn Deever, two weeks old daughter born to Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Deever, August 25th. The members are looking forward to the initiating of the little member at the next meeting which will be held at the home of Mrs. Towel.

The reduction will be run in the tax books taking 15 per cent off last year's values in the city and villages and 25 per cent on farms in the county. The assessors estimates of new property will be used as a basis of reduction where lots of buildings have not been on the books before.

ROUND UP CHICKEN THIEVES

Farmers in Green Garden and other Eastern Will County townships have been losing hundreds of chickens of late as the result of a series of robberies in which as many as 100 chickens were stolen in one clip.

The farmers of that section carry chicken theft insurance and as the losses have been pretty heavy the insurance company decided to take steps leading to the capture of the chicken thieves. The Wm. P. Burns Detective Agency of Chicago placed Detective Thomas Slack in charge of the case. He arrived the latter part of last week and together with deputy Christ Sangmeister of Green Garden township patrolled the highways of the township and about 1:15 o'clock Friday morning they discovered two cars, one a Buick and the other a Nash with a rumble seat.

Two Italians were found in the Buick, but no one was in the Nash.

The men were placed under arrest. After waiting for their confederates to return and failing to do so, the trail was taken up and search begun for the rest of the gang. A few bags of chickens were found along the roadside near the Wm. Fredericks farm and also near the Ferdinand Haake farm. The chicken thieves arrested gave information leading to the arrest of another Italian and three negroes, all from Chicago Heights. All were taken to the county jail at Joliet. The Buick car was traced to an Italian meat market owner in Chicago and he was also arrested. The Italians have been released on bond, but the negroes not being able to furnish bail, are still being held in the county jail.

Much credit is due the excellent work of Detective Slack and deputy Sangmeister in bagging this ring of chicken thieves and the farmers of Eastern Will County are circulating petitions asking the court to give the thieves a good stiff sentence.

The farmers of this section of the county are determined to put a stop to chicken stealing.

The invention is positive in operation and contains a minimum of parts. It is highly efficient in use and economical in manufacture. May be expeditiously attached to any window which when in operating position will prevent the upper and lower sash of a window from being opened from the outside while permitting both the upper and lower to be moved from the inside.

Mr. DeVol has had models made of the invention and will exhibit them in actual operation at the Patent Exposition to be held in the Merchandise Mart in Chicago Sept. 14th to 27th.

Cook Co., Carries Wolf Rd. Paving On

The following letter received by the Editor from Mr. A. H. Lauer, a well known real estate dealer of DesPlaines, shows what Cook County is doing in paving Wolf road:

"I want to thank you for the Mokena News boosting Wolf Road. I am pleased to know that you are meeting with success in getting the right of way settlement with Mr. C. M. Cleveland. Let us hope that the day is near by when the connection can be made with the Lincoln highway and Route 51.

"Contract has been let and under construction on Wolf Road from Lake street to North Avenue. About ready to let another contract from Irving Park Blvd., north to State route 58, known as Golf road.

"Two large mixers are pouring cement from DesPlaines north to Hinckley road. Expect to finish this by October 1st.

"I finally got the information which I promised you. The plans are ready but contracts have not been let from 143rd street north to Palos Park Forest Preserve to 111th street. I got this information from the State Engineers.

"I am having a Wolf Road booster in our local paper this week. I will try and send you a copy. Wish you success on the south end of the old historical Wolf Road."

(Supervisor Wm. Kampe of the town of Frankfort advises that he and Highway Commissioner, Emil D. Cappel of Frankfort township, recently met with Mr. C. M. Cleveland relative to securing the necessary right of way thru Mr. Cleveland's pasture for the new Wolf road route surveyed to the east of the original survey, and that Mr. Cleveland signified his willingness to sign up and sell the right of way required thru the pasture land. The right of way of Wolf road from the point where the paving now ends to the connection with the Lincoln highway and with Route 51 is now assured and the whole matter of completing the paving of Wolf road in Will County rests entirely with the Will County bond issue committee and no one else.)

WHERE IS THE MODERN MOSES WHO WILL LEAD MOKENA?

Palos Park, Ill. Sept. 8, 1931.

Editor Mokena News:

Where, Oh Where, is the Mokena road spirit and "get-together" of the days of the Wolf Road boosters when the school meetings meant standing room, and Mokena was successful in placing Wolf road on the map. And Now? No one seems to agree. One story of the delay does not agree with another and there are dozens of explanations as to "Why Wolf Road is not extended south", but the unpleasant fact remains that this is not being done and that until Mokena finds its old fighting spirit, (not as individuals or as small groups) it will not be done.

Is there a modern Moses in Mokena, who will lead to the clearing of the fog of Why and Wherefore now in effect, with no action, to the old, (Go, Build the Wolf Road) with all interests of Mokena in complete support. Who is he? Where is he?

Why not try one of the old time meetings. Everyone present, discuss the different views, decide on a plan and then GO!

Tinley Ball Team Wins 2 And Loses 2 Games

The Tinley Park baseball club gave the home town a lot of base ball over the holidays, playing two games, Sunday and Monday. Tinley broke even in the four encounters, winning two and losing two. The attendance at both games was the largest of all the season and speaks well for the brand of ball the boys are playing.

The Mokena vs. Tinley game was a fast game and was featured by the brilliant hurling of Kenneth Devlin. He allowed only two hits and struck out 13. was scored on only in the first inning and was never in danger again, being always in great form.

The Palos Park vs. Tinley game was a fast game, Thomas having the Tinley team well in hand and all the way. The boys just couldn't hit his slow ball and won easily.

The featured game with Oak Forest on Monday was a fine and well played game. Elmer Schultz pitched for Tinley and gave Oak Forest no opposition, allowing only five hits and striking out 12. He issued no

Frankfort to Celebrate 100th Anniversary

It is proposed to invite the exhibition of old time relics and to give prizes for these exhibits and also to hold an old settlers dance with all old time music and prizes for this event. It is planned to hold the celebration in the Frankfort grove on the afternoon and evening of Sunday, September 27th. All kinds of amusements are also being planned for. A meeting of the promoters of the celebration will be held soon and various committees appointed to have charge of the celebration. The News-Bulletin advocated that the 100th anniversary of Frankfort twp. be celebrated in an article a few weeks ago. Watch for more particulars each week.

TINLEY TAXPAYERS TO ASK REDUCTIONS IN ASSESSED VALUATIONS

The taxpayers of Bremen township, farmers and residents of villages are invited to attend a taxpayers meeting to be held in Tinley Park this coming Saturday night at eight o'clock for the purpose of discussing a cut in the present real estate and farm assessed valuations. This meeting is being sponsored by Charles Nielsen, assessor of Bremen township and the Cook County Farm Bureau.

walks and would have had a shut out only for an error in the ninth inning. The feature hit of the game was a three base hit by Marsh in the 6th inning with a man on and he scored on a single by I. Siebrandt. Friess also pitched nice ball striking out nine men but his own wildness in the third inning when he walked two men and a hit batsman put him in trouble and two runs came in with out a hit. Unger at second base turned in some sparkling baseball and he was the outstanding player on the team.

Frankfort won easily in the last game. Tinley was so tired they couldn't play and with Mager in rare form, walked away with the game. Tinley is hoping to get a return game to show Frankfort they can play better ball and to avenge the defeat.

This week the Beverly Stars again form the opposition, the game to be called at 3 p. m. and a good time will be had by all who attend. The usual prices will prevail.

Romance in Realm of World Finance

Drama Is Woven Around the Pound and Franc.

London.—Romance still lives in the world of international finance, although it may be dimmed by a few drab technicalities.

The most recent drama was woven about the English pound and the French franc, with the Austrian shilling as the poor, long suffering orphan. Its sensational ending dispelled, for the present at least, all hopes of France to make Paris the greatest money market in Europe.

The curtain rises with the Credit-Anstalt, once the most powerful institution in central Europe, slowly approaching collapse. Its funds had been used liberally to support Austrian industry and manufacturers in adjoining states, when the economic depression descended.

In a moment of desperation, Austrian leaders turned to their old ally, Germany, which had little money to offer, but suggested a reciprocal customs scheme whereby industry of both states would benefit, thus lessening the pressure upon the Credit-Anstalt. Thus was born the Austro-German customs union, which precipitated more heated discussion in Europe than any incident since the armistice.

France feared a new alliance between Austria and Germany in contravention of the treaty of Versailles and offered financial assistance to the Credit-Anstalt in return for abolition of the proposed scheme.

However, after the measure had been referred to the Hague court for final settlement, France's enthusiasm for offering financial aid cooled. In return for floating a $21,000,000 loan urgently needed by the Credit-Anstalt, French financiers demanded Austria scrap the customs union.

Austria's acquiescence, observers pointed out, would have made her simply another franc child of Paris and enhance the city's prestige as a money market. At the crucial moment, however, the Bank of England as the "hero" swept upon the stage with its money bags filled with $21,000,000.

The Credit-Anstalt was saved. The Bank of England's reputation had a new glitter and France was left with nothing but a daze as to how the rich plum had slipped from its grasp.

In addition, French hopes of Paris becoming a great financial center have of late been dampened by the spread of the general depression in France. In May it had an unfavorable balance of visible trade estimated at $45,000,000, the largest it had known for any month in many years.

Denies He's Typical

Representative Robert Low Bacon of New York was designated the other day by Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, distinguished scientist and curator of physical anthropology of the National Museum, as typifying the average American of future generations. But Mr. Bacon indignantly denied that he was a type. According to Hrdlicka, a race of tall, ruddy faced sandy haired people, browned and hardened by outdoor life, will inhabit the United States in coming years.

ABOUT THE HOUSE

Rust in ovens is due mostly to moisture that develops from baking or broiling. If the oven door is kept open for twenty minutes after use the moisture will evaporate and remove the cause of rust.

Dry chewing gum, often carried indoors on the soles of shoes, is easily removed from carpets and rugs by putting on a few drops of gasoline. The gum will crumble and can be brushed off.

Serving a sherbet with the meal course adds a novelty touch to the dinner. It is not only delicious in itself but gives a piquant contrasting flavor to heavier dishes. Another all-important point for the busy housewife is that sherbets are easily and quickly prepared.

A few pieces of candy, some small cakes, in fact, anything sweet, he said, is not only a pleasant after-math to dinner but helps stimulate the flow of gastric juices needed to complete digestion.

Big Cities Spend More Than Three Billion

New York Takes the Lead in List of 250.

Washington.—The 250 cities of the nation having a population of more than 30,000 paid $3,435,280,927 for the operation of their governments in 1929.

Their revenue totaled $3,075,234,308, and property subject to ad valorem taxes totaled for city purposes was valued at $80,402,335,256, or $1,814 per capita.

These figures are given in a compilation made public by the Department of Commerce.

The revenue receipts totaled $607,009,389 more than the payments of the year, exclusive of payments for permanent improvements, but $360,055,619 less than the total payments, including those for permanent improvements.

In only 87 of the cities was there sufficient revenue to meet all payments during the year. The payments in excess of revenue receipts were met from the proceeds of debt obligations.

The gross debt outstanding at the close of the year amounted to $8,961,973,215, or a per capita of $202.22, consisting of $7,886,749,779, funded or fixed; $539,446,218, special assessment bonds and certificates; $436,405,087, revenue loans, and $90,312,131, outstanding warrants.

The net indebtedness of the 250 cities amounted to $6,130,289,576, or $138.32 per capita.

With an assessed property valuation of $18,362,062,000, revenues of $663,406,000 and $504,734,000 representing the cost of government, New York led the list.

Following New York in the matter of governmental cost was Chicago, with a total of $172,795,000. The next eight cities, ranked according to their governmental costs, were Philadelphia, Detroit, Los Angeles, Boston, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Buffalo and Baltimore.

New York was first also in its net debt, which amounted to $1,546,859,000, an increase over that of 1928 of $69,434,000.

Motor Busses Supplant

Ancient Railroad Line

Motor busses have supplanted the service provided by the first steam railroad line operated in the United States and its abandonment has been recommended to the interstate commerce commission. The line, 23 miles long, was constructed by the Delaware & Hudson railroad in 1828 between Carbondale and Honesdale, Pa., to transport "stone coal," as anthracite was then known. The Stourbridge Lion, first steam locomotive operated in the United States, was taken for a trial run on the line in August, 1829. The test run showed that the rails, wooden stringers capped with rolled iron strips, were not strong enough to sustain the locomotive and the steam engines were abandoned until the roadbed was strengthened several years later.

Investigation Seems to Put Razorback in Bad

Spending a day with a razorback hog may not be an attractive enterprise, but such a procedure recently yielded some valuable information to the state forest commission of Mississippi. Believing that the razorback was a serious destroyer of long-leaf pines, and wanting to get irrefutable evidence on the subject, P. N. Howell, one of the commissioners, followed a hog for eight and one-fourth hours, from eight o'clock in the morning to four that afternoon. In that time Mr. Howell counted 400 trees which the hog rooted out. At that same rate, the commissioner calculated, in 100 days the razorback would destroy trees valued at $200, based on the cost of their growing and planting—a sum more than forty times the value of the hog itself.

Mid-Season Ensemble

A pert little coque feather perched just above the roll-up brim of the white crocheted turban adds a fetching note to Chanel's smart mid-season ensemble of black, white and orange flat crepe. Orange lines the hip-length bolero jacket and furnishes the saw-tooth edging on the vestee and pockets. A narrow edging of the same tone is noted on the skirt. Black and white pumps and a chain necklace are accessories.

STAGE COACH
TALES

By E. C. TAYLOR

From Stage Driver to Railroad
President

THE Hon. Ginery Twitchell rose from obscurity to become one of the leading figures of the era of stage coach transportation, then president of the railroad that put his stage lines out of business, and then a member of congress.

Many a New England child, hearing the cry of "Ginery's coming! Ginery's coming!" and probably wondering what a "ginery" was, watched with delight as a great stage coach with six prancing, reeking, foaming horses came to a stop in front of the Bay-state house, in Boston, or the taverns of Worcester, Mass., or Brattleboro, Vt.

Seated atop the magnificent vehicle was a dignified, self-contained man, ruddy of face, his stout body swathed in a heavy greatcoat and on his head a tall silk hat. Ginery Twitchell would sit erect on the coachman's seat, gather the reins well in hand and suddenly be off with a great rattle of wheels and blowing of horns.

Ginery Twitchell was called "Honorable" even then. Probably it was because of his vast reputation for integrity, and probably also because he was an inveterate politician, and always had a finger in the political maneuverings and plottings of his part of New England.

His stage coach was one of the most famous that ever rolled over the rough roads of the early days of the United States. It was built in 1837 by Henry T. Breck of Worcester, and never was repaired beyond occasionally getting a new coat of varnish. In 1840, at the request of the citizens of Barre, Vt., seats were added to the top, so that the great coach carried 32 persons, 12 inside and 20 outside.

It once carried 62 young women from Worcester on a blackberry excursion, with eight horses drawing this record load. During the presidential campaign of 1840, it carried the political leaders to and from meetings around Quinsigamond.

His last driver, Henry S. Miner, narrates that Twitchell before the days of the railroad collected election votes on horseback, and once rode from Greenfield, Mass., to Worcester, a distance of 54 miles, in four and a half hours. He had relays of fresh horses every six or ten miles, and made the ride at night.

In the days when he was a post rider, before he had accumulated sufficient funds to buy an interest in a stage coach line, he once slept in his clothes, including buckskin underwear, in the American House in Worcester for a week, waiting for despatches from British steamers. He also had men and fresh horses waiting the entire week along the road to Norwich, Conn.

When the boats arrived, Twitchell mounted his horse and started for Norwich. He met the boat, and delivered the despatches in New York hours ahead of any other post line.

Ginery Twitchell was a great favorite with those who rode with him, and the seat beside the driver was eagerly vied for, even in bad weather. He had an inexhaustible fund of racy anecdotes with which he regaled his acquaintances. The people along his post and stage routes trusted him with their business commissions, and he performed a service similar to that of the express companies of today.

After a long period of self-denial in his early days, he bought a stage coach and two horses from a Mr. Stockwell, and established a stage line between Brattleboro and Worcester. In 1843 he owned and operated a line between Barre and Worcester, and later established a stage line from Greenfield to Brattleboro.

In that year the postmaster general at Washington advertised for contracts to carry the mail and Twitchell, instead of bidding for one route, went to Washington and obtained several. Within a short time he was the largest stage operator in New England, owning a large number of fine stage lines and coaches.

One of his feats was driving a coach from Worcester, Mass., to Hartford, Conn., a distance of 60 miles, in 3 hours and 20 minutes, through deep snow. That was on January 23, 1846.

When the railroads came, Twitchell turned to the new mode of transportation, and became first president of the Boston & Western railroad.

SOME MISSIONARY EXPERIENCES

LESSON TEXT—Acts 14:1-28.
GOLDEN TEXT—Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Hardships of Missionaries.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Christianity Facing Other Religions.

I. Paul and Barnabas Preaching at Iconium (vv. 1-7).

Their experience here was much the same as at Antioch. They entered the Jewish synagogue and preached, causing a multitude of Jews and Gentiles to believe. The unbelieving Jews stirred up the Gentiles to the most bitter opposition. Concerning their work in Iconium observe.

1. Their manner of preaching (v. 1). They "so spake" that a great multitude believed. They were true preachers. Only that which brings conviction of sin and induces decisions for Christ can be truly said to be preaching in the biblical sense. It is not enough merely to bring the truth to the people. It must be brought in such a way that men and women will be induced to decide for Christ.

2. Their attitude toward opposition (v. 3). This is suggested by the word "therefore." "Long time therefore they tarried." The opposition did not prevent their preaching but incited them to continue preaching. Christian workers should not give up work because of opposition.

3. Their preaching accompanied with miracles (v. 3). Since the opposition was so fierce, the Lord granted special help in his vindication of their testimony.

4. The effect of their preaching (v. 4). The multitude of the city was divided. Where men faithfully preach the gospel there will be division.

5. Paul and Barnabas assaulted (vv. 5-7). The Jews and the Gentiles united in this assault. Being apprised of this effort, Paul and Barnabas fled to Lystra and Derby, where they preached the gospel.

II. An Attempt to Worship Paul and Barnabas as Gods (vv. 8-13).

1. The occasion (vv. 8-10). It was the healing of a lame man. God's gracious power shown in healing this lame man occasioned new difficulty. That which ought to have been a help was turned into a hindrance. This was a notable miracle. The man had never walked. On hearing Paul preach, faith was born in his heart (Rom. 10:17). When Paul perceived that he trusted Christ, he called with a loud voice that all could hear for the man to stand upright. The cure was instantaneous, for he leaped up and walked (v. 10).

2. The method (vv. 11-13). They called Barnabas Jupiter, and Paul Mercurius because he was the chief speaker. The priest of Jupiter brought oxen and garlands ready to offer sacrifices unto these men (v. 13). In the person of Jesus Christ God has actually appeared to man (John 1:14; Phil. 2:7, 8).

3. Their efforts frustrated (vv. 14-18). This foolish act was happily averted by the tact of the apostles as exhibited in the address of the occasion:

a. They denied that they were divine beings.

b. They directed them to turn away from these vain things unto the living God who made heaven and earth.

III. The Stoning of Paul (vv. 19-22). Wicked Jews from Antioch and Iconium pursued Paul with relentless hate to this place where they stirred up the very people who had been willing to worship them a short time before. This shows that satanic worship can soon be turned into satanic hate. This hatred took form in the stoning of Paul and the dragging of him out of the city for dead. Having been raised up by God, he with undaunted courage pressed on with his duties as a missionary bearing the good tidings to the lost. Soon after this, Paul turned back and revisited the places where he had preached, telling them that through great tribulation they must enter into the Kingdom of God.

IV. The Organization of Churches in the Field (vv. 23-28).

Evangelization with Paul did not mean a hasty and superficial preaching of the gospel, but the establishment of a permanent work. Elders were appointed in every church. The work of the missionary is not done until there is established on the field self-governing and self-propagating churches.

Christ's Coming

My friends, all the singing about it in the world will not bring the coming of Christ a day nearer—and there are no songs of the Christian church which so fill my heart with gladness and my eyes with tears as the songs of Christ's coming. But service will.—J. Stuart Holden.

Our Rewards

We are rewarded, not according to our sphere, or the results of our work, but according to the sincerity and beauty of our motives.—F. B. Meyer.

FINE OLD GARDEN
TO BE "RESTORED"Good News for Lovers of Horticulture.

The oldest botanical garden in the United States is located within the limits of the city of Philadelphia, and is one of the shrines of the horticulturally minded tourist. The two-hundredth anniversary of the founding of this old garden was celebrated on June 5 and 6 of this year, with ceremonies suited to the occasion. The opening day was spent in special exercises of a historical nature, and on the second day the visitors were guests at the garden, tea being served in the old home of the founder, John Bartram, a section of which was built in 1700, by Swedish settlers, and became the foundation from which Mr. Bartram built later. The building was purchased by Mr. Bartram in 1728, and the original house still remains in the garden enclosure.

The Bartram garden is now undergoing a process of restoration that will bring it back to its original form, a fitting tribute to the plot of land that has been devoted to garden purposes for two hundred years. The house has been restored to its original form and now the garden, through the efforts of the garden clubs of Philadelphia and surrounding country, will be made to resemble as nearly as possible the garden of the old days. These clubs have undertaken as their first work to restore to the garden the native rhododendrons, mountain laurel and other evergreens.

John Bartram was a native American, his birthplace being Darby, Pa., near Philadelphia. He lived to the good old age of seventy-eight and died in Bartram house in 1777. The garden is located on the west bank of the Schuylkill river, and for many years it was a most isolated spot. It was through his voluminous correspondence with Peter Collinson, a grower in London, England, and the exchange of many seeds and plants, that Mr. Bartram's work became well known.

Another famous botanical garden which ranks as the finest in the world is at Buitenzorg, Java. This garden in its present state of perfection being the product of nearly a century of effort on the part of the Dutch inhabitants of Java. So wonderful are the flowers and plants that the garden, which includes 90 acres, is known as "The Garden of the East." L. C. Breed in the Gardener's Chronicle tells us of the vegetation in this garden of wonders. The governor-general's house, which is located in the garden, is approached, we are informed, through the finest avenue of trees in the world. These are Kanari trees reaching 100 feet overland and have tall straight trunks, covered with stag-horn ferns, Bird's nest ferns, orchids and every type of parasite and air plant that the climate will permit. Mr. Breed also describes a palm that stands about 40 feet high, and a "wilderness of climbing plants," among which are palms with branches 600 feet in length. He makes note of another palm that bears the largest fruit and the largest leaves of any known tree, the fruit being two feet in diameter, and the leaves 10 feet. Some of the trees rise to a height of 100 feet before the branches spread.

First Concrete Road

The first concrete road of any consequence in the world was constructed in Detroit, and was eleven feet wide by one mile long. The American Magazine, in a study of modern road building, tells the story of his initial experiment. It was fathered by Ed Hines, a Detroit printer and an enthusiastic bicyclist, who had become president of the League of American Wheelmen.

Give—and Take

The best way to enjoy life to the full is to remember that it is a measure to be filled and not a cup to be drained.

No matter how small and neglected a little old town is, some person far away will cry about it.

Investigation Seems to Put Razorback in Bad

Spending a day with a razorback hog may not be an attractive enterprise, but such a procedure recently yielded some valuable information to the state forest commission of Mississippi. Believing that the razorback was a serious destroyer of long-leaf pines, and wanting to get irrefutable evidence on the subject, P. N. Howell, one of the commissioners, followed a hog for eight and one-fourth hours, from eight o'clock in the morning to four that afternoon. In that time Mr. Howell counted 400 trees which the hog rooted out. At that same rate, the commissioner calculated, in 100 days the razorback would destroy trees valued at $200, based on the cost of their growing and planting—a sum more than forty times the value of the hog itself.

Man. Lutherans teach that man is not the product of an alleged evolution, but was made by God through an act of direct creation; that he was given an immortal soul, was originally endowed with perfect holiness, and created for eternal life; that, however, he sinned, deprived himself of a loving communion with God, became wholly depraved, and fell a victim to death; and that in his natural state he cannot, by any power of his own, reestablish right relations with God. Chapter XII

PAR PERFORMANCE GUARANTEED

INVENTORS seem to be working overtime. Almost every day a new electric or gas appliance for the home makes its debut on the market. It may be a new kind of cooker or mixer for the kitchen. It may be a new exerciser for the bedroom or a wringerless washing machine for the laundry. It may be almost anything.

Naturally, as each new appliance appears, people wonder. It may sound like a good idea—but will it work?

The Public Service Company lets its appliance testing laboratory answer this question. Eight years ago the need for a censorship program for appliances sold in Public Service Stores was recognized. Too many appliances were being rushed to market before they were perfected.

Intent upon selling only appliances it can conscientiously guarantee the performance of, the Company organized its own testing laboratory. Before any piece of gas or electric equipment is stocked in Public Service Stores—whether it is a tiny fuse plug or a house-heating boiler—it enters the laboratory "on suspicion." Its performance is carefully checked under a variety of conditions. Unless every test is passed, it is rejected.

Last year 125 important new appliances were submitted to the testing laboratory. After their probation period, less than half of them were certified as satisfactory for sale. The rest were returned to their manufacturers with specific recommendations for improvement.

Suppose a new washing machine comes into the laboratory. Its vibration is studied. The speed of its parts is observed. Its insulation resistance is tested. Its motor efficiency is checked at several voltages... Right now there is a washer in the laboratory that uses too much current the first minute it is switched on. Unless the manufacturer can correct this, the machine will never be sold in Public Service Stores.

Safety and efficiency are the major points the laboratory considers. But usefulness to the housewife is also checked by the Company's home service department. Appliances are put to work under practical every-day conditions to see whether they bring the promised convenience.

The Public Service Company values the confidence of its customers. Through its policy of recommending only the highest type of appliances (appliances that it can back up with a liberal guarantee), it is trying to help customers make the best possible use of the electricity and gas they are receiving.

The Company does not test every new appliance that appears on the market. Because it is not sold in Public Service Stores is no indication that an appliance is undesirable. Customers can be sure, however, that every appliance that has graduated from the Company's testing laboratory is Grade A—whether they buy it in a Public Service Store or from another appliance dealer.

Illinois ranked second only to Michigan among the east north central states, according to the recent Wickersham crime commission report, in the total cost of penal and corrective treatment in 1928, spending $3,117,515, a per capita expense of 40.9 cents. The report said, however, that figures could not be taken "as a basis for judging the relative efficiency and economy of the penal and corrective systems of several states." "A low cost per inmate," it said, "may mean an efficient or economical institution, or it may mean a parsimoniously run, inefficient institution, which makes rather than rehabilitates criminals."

Per capita cost of penal and corrective treatment in large Illinois cities, outside of Chicago and Evanston, as given in the Wickersham crime commission report based on 1928 figures, starts with Rockford at $2.96 and proceeds downward in this order: Springfield, Oak Park, Quincy, Aurora, Peoria, Joliet, Cicero, Waukegan, Berwyn, East St. Louis, Danville, Elgin; then at less than $2, Alton, Decatur, Maywood, Moline, Belleville, Granite City, Rock Island, and Galesburg. Galesburg's figure is given for year ending March 31, 1931, and Bloomington per capita cost is not given. Chicago's per capita cost is $6.65 and Evanston's $4.55. This includes police, prosecution, courts, penal and correctional institution and probation costs.

Gov. Louis L. Emmerson has appointed State Representative William G. Thon of Chicago as head of the George Washington bi-centennial state commission to plan for the celebration of the two hundredth birthday anniversary of the first President, February 22, 1932. Others on this commission are: Probate Judge Henry Horner, William G. Bierd, William G. Gurley, Mrs. Samuel W. Earle, and Mrs. Edward G. Snodgrass, Chicago; William G. Brinton, Highland Park; Prof. James A. James, Evanston; George R. Hemingway, Oak Park; Lewis K. Torbet, Mason; Mrs. Sarah Bond Hanley and Prof. L. E. Robinson, Monmouth; Mrs. Laura B. Evans, Taylorville, and Mrs. H. Eugene Chubbuck, Peoria.

"More Outdoor Life for Illinois," published by the department of conservation, gives interesting and instructive information about fur-bearing animals, fish and birds. An account of the fish and fish hatcheries is well told, and includes a number of illustrations of the latter. Raising pheasants and the breeding of quail, which are two of the recent projects of the department, are given considerable attention. The booklet also tells a great deal about other upland game birds as well as aquatic ones, with special mention of ducks, geese, prairie chickens and turkeys. Fur-farming being one of the newer industries, the book tells of fur-bearing animals and how to start the farms, giving instructions for building the pens, the dens or kennels of the fox, the mink, muskrat, rabbit and skunk, with interesting stories of their habits and characteristics. In short the publication is written in a pleasing manner and a copy should be in every home in Illinois. Director Ralph Bradford, of the department, will be glad to furnish copies upon request. Address him at the Capitol building, Springfield.

Girls of the state fair school of domestic science, board and faculty members, were guests at the governor's mansion of Mrs. Louis L. Emmerson, Thursday afternoon before fair week. Tea was served in the state dining room with the honor pupils presiding at the urns.

Winners in the various classifications of the American Legion drum and bugle corps contests at the state fair were: Class A—Kankakee, first; Macomb, second; St. Charles, third; Peoria, fourth. Class B—Galva, first; Aledo, second; East St. Louis, third; Galesburg, fourth. Bands—Jacksonville, first; Peoria, second; Belleville, third. Clown bands—Decatur, first; Peru, second; Arthur, third.

At a meeting recently held by the Judicial Advisory Council of Illinois, the following officers were elected: Senator A. S. Cuthbertson, chairman; John D. Black, vice chairman; Representative David I. Swanson, secretary. The council consists of the following: Senators A. S. Cuthbertson, Louis H. Hanna, Victor P. Michel, James J. Barbour, Thos. J. Courtney; Representatives Roger F. Little, John P. Devine, Frank A. McCarthy, David I. Swanson, Michael L. Igou, and Judge Edward D. Shurtleff, Judge Norman L. Jones, Franklin L. Velde, John D. Black and June C. Smith.

Violet Cross of Kankakee county and Glenwood Gaebie of Washington county were adjudged the healthiest girl and boy in Illinois at the 4-H club contests at the state fair. They will represent Illinois at the national contest to be held the first week of December in Chicago.

J. Ward Smith, of LaSalle county, was elected president of the County Treasurers' Association of Illinois and Herbert J. Jones, of Will county, secretary-treasurer at its sessions in Springfield.

Secretary of State William J. Stratton was granted a life membership in the State Association of Supervisors, County Commissioners, County and Probate Clerks and County Auditors of Illinois at its meeting in Springfield, he having been a supervisor for fourteen years.

Dr. John Dill Robertson, prominent in Chicago politics for several years and delving into state politics to quite an extent, especially while identified with the William Hale Thompson faction, died at his summer home in Fontana, Wis., at the age of sixty. He was commissioner of health in Chicago during seven years of the Mayor Thompson administration.

The selection of twenty-eight works of Illinois artists, valued at $15,000, was made from the exhibition recently held at the Merchandise Mart in Chicago and these will be added to the permanent display in the local state museum gallery. The majority of the paintings and sculpture are the works of Chicago artists.

Interest in Russia's experiment, "The five-year plan," has stimulated the publication of a large number of books about this country within the past year. Of special interest is Marshak's "New Russia's Primer," written for the use of Russian boys and girls, to acquaint them with the "Five-year plan" of construction. This book has been translated by George S. Counts of Columbia university with the purpose of explaining to American adults the various phases of the Russian experiment. Other books written on Russia's economic and political policies are: Hoover, "Economic Life of Soviet Russia"; Hindus, "Red Bread"; Fischer, "Soviets in World Affairs"; Hopper, "Pan-Sovietism"; Eddy, "Challenge of Russia"; White, "These Russians"; and they are available for loan from the library extension division, Springfield.

State game wardens are conducting a campaign, and one which is meeting with much success, to rid the Mississippi, Illinois, Wabash and other large rivers of the state of so-called fishermen, who use nets or traps in violation of the law, most of whom are men engaged in handling fish on a commercial basis.

The second district of the Supreme court, composed of the counties of Madison, Bond, Marion, Clay, Richland, Lawrence, Crawford, Jasper, Effingham, Fayette, Montgomery, Macoupin, Shelby, Cumberland, Clark, Greene, Jersey, Calhoun, Christian, Pike and Scott, will elect a successor to Justice William M. Farmer, August 31. The Republicans have nominated H. S. Williams, son of former Congressman Tom Williams of the Twenty-fourth congressional district. Candidate Williams is a promising young lawyer practicing in Taylorville and is a law partner of former United States District Attorney Walter M. Provine. The Democrats have nominated Judge Norman L. Jones of Carrollton, who has served the Seventh judicial circuit for a number of terms and whom the Supreme court selected ten years ago for assignment as one of the three justices of the Second Appellate court. In addition to fulfilling his duties in the Seventh Judicial Circuit court, Judge Jones has averaged in excess of 65 written opinions per year in this appeal court.

Thomas Arkle Clark, for 30 years dean of men at the University of Illinois, recently resigned this position and handed the reins over to Dr. Fred H. Turner, appointed acting dean. Tens of thousands of young men have stood before Dean Clark's desk, either to be praised, censured, punished, befriended, seeking to borrow money or asking advice.

A checking of what would occur should Circuit Judge Norman L. Jones be chosen as a Supreme court judge has revealed Sangamon county as being entitled to the majority of delegates in a Republican convention nominating a new Circuit court judge. It would have 59 out of 115 delegates. In the Democratic convention Sangamon county would have only 45 out of 103 delegates. Other counties included are Greene, Jersey, Macoupin, Morgan and Scott.

Arden D. McKee, of Creston, Iowa, president of the American Swine Growers association, who was attending the state fair, addressed the Springfield Optimist club. He gave reasons why the fair should be well supported and stated that the Illinois fair is one of the greatest in the United States, if not the greatest.

From the report recently made public by Representative Clinton Searle, chairman of the contingent expense committee of the house of representatives, it is noted a saving of $1,061 in the incidental expenses of the Fifty-seventh general assembly was affected over similar expenses for the session of the Fifty-sixth.

John P. Garner, of Chicago, has recently been appointed security supervisor in the industrial commission of the department of labor. Edwin R. Wright, also of Chicago, was appointed in the industrial office of the state department of labor.

Mrs. Eliza Westman, social worker in Danville for forty years and wife of Oscar Westman, grocery executive, died at her home of embolism. She leaves also a son, Horace Westman of New York, and an adopted daughter, Mrs. Lulu Craft.

The enemy made a determined stand along the Ourcq river and some of the hardest fighting of the period occurred at this time. August 3, the Fourth division relieved the Forty-second. The Third corps (Bullard), with the American Twenty-eighth and Thirty-second divisions, relieved the French Thirty-eighth corps on the right of our First corps. Once established beyond the Ourcq, our two corps advanced rapidly toward the Vesle river, meeting with little opposition.

We had in all nine American divisions, equal to eighteen French divisions, engaged in this second battle of the Marne. This force, together with the staff, supply, medical troops and aviation, amounted to a total force of nearly 300,000 actively employed during that period. We suffered 65,000 casualties.

CHAPTER LII

I attended a conference of commanders in chief at General Foch's headquarters Wednesday, July 24, 1918, to discuss plans for offensive operations. Present were Generals Foch, Petain, Weygand and Buat; Field Marshal Haig and General Lawrence, and General Conner, chief of operations, Boyd and Hughes and myself.

There was pronounced good feeling and confidence. General Foch gave a resume of the general situation. He proposed no definite plan, but submitted his remarks as the basis of discussion.

The main point was that the fifth German offensive of the year had been checked and the allied counteroffensive, beginning July 18, had transformed it into defeat. It was the general opinion that every advantage should be taken of this fact and that the allies should continue their attacks with as much vigor as possible.

On Par With Enemy.

General Foch said with satisfaction that we had now reached an equality in numbers of combatants and an actual superiority in reserves. As the enemy would soon be required to relieve a considerable number of tired divisions from the active front, the allies would rapidly gain further superiority through the constantly increasing number of Americans.

All information went to show that the enemy had two armies, so to speak, Foch continued, one an exhausted holding army and the other a shock army, already weakened maneuvering behind this frail front. Unquestionably we had material advantage in aviation and tanks, and to a smaller degree in artillery, and this would be augmented by the arrival and armament of American artillery personnel.

As to the reserve strength behind the allies, it would soon be powerful indeed if the rate of 250,000 per month at which the Americans were pouring in could be maintained. One could sense an approaching crisis on the enemy's side possibly not so very remote, because of the difficulty he was having in keeping up the effective strength of his units.

Allies Now Hold Initiative.

Beyond these advantages of material force in our favor there was also the moral ascendancy we had gained by our recent victories and his failures. Foch felt as we all did, that the allies now held the initiative and that from this time on they should abandon the defensive attitude that had been so long imposed upon them and continue the offensive without cessation.

He then pointed out the following offenses which it was evident would be indispensable to later operations:

The release of the railroad Paris-Avicourt in the Marne region by the French; the Paris-Amiens railroad by a concerted action of the British and French; the Paris-Avicourt railroad in the region of Commerc by the reduction of the St. Mihiel salient by the American army, which, by reducing the front, would bring us within reach of the Briey region and permit action on a larger scale between the Meuse and Moselle.

Further offensives were foreseen, having in view the release of the mining sections to the north by definitely driving the enemy from the region of Dunkirk and Calais.

No Idea of Ending War in 1918.

No one suggested that the plans of the moment or those to follow might be carried so far as to terminate the war in 1918. Concerning the part each should play Foch asked expressions of opinion of the respective commanders in chief as to how these or any other operations we might propose should be conducted.

Marshal Haig gave his views and plans, which agreed with the general outline suggested, as did General Petain, who wanted further to consider the possibilities. As far as these preliminary operations applied to the Americans, they were simply a restatement of the plans we had been leading up to ever since our entry into the war. I, therefore, advised that details of organization and supply be receiving every consideration in the preparation of the American army in 1916 gains part.

While at General Foch's headquarters I arranged with General Petain for the expansion of the First corps, then operating in the Marne sector, by which four American divisions were to be placed in the line with two in reserve. It was my hope that this would be the basis for the preliminary formation of an American army on this front. En route to Chaumont I stopped to call on Liggett and apprise him of the possibility of additional American divisions for his corps.

Expedition to Russia.

The supreme war council was prone to listen to suggestions for the use of allied troops at various places other than the western front. One of these, on which the British seemed to be especially insistent, was to send troops to help the so-called white army in Russia, to keep open the communications through Murmansk in the Archangel.

I was opposed to any such idea, as it would simply mean scattering our resources, all of which were needed on the western front. But President Wilson was prevailed upon to help and I was directed to send a regiment provided General Foch had no objections. As apparently he had already considered the question, he gave his approval and a regiment was accordingly sent. The Three Hundred Thirty-ninth infantry, Lieut. Col. George E. Stewart commanding, together with one battalion of engineers and one field hospital, were designated for this service.

First Field Army.

In view of the prospect for the early assembly of corps and divisions to form our army, it became urgent that the organization be hastened with all possible speed. The outlines had been determined and members of the First army staff were at work on the details. My formal order creating the First field army was issued July 24, to take effect August 10, with headquarters at La Ferte-sous-Jouarre.

Immediate consideration was given the improvement of the general supply system. Although the recent reorganization had helped, it had been my purpose for some time to make changes in personnel in the S. O. S., particularly in the position of chief, which demanded great administrative ability. After much thought the choice fell to General Harbord. His knowledge of organization, his personality, his energy and his loyalty made him the outstanding choice. Reluctance to lose his services in command of troops, where he had shown himself a brilliant leader, caused me to delay until his division could be relieved from the active front.

CHAPTER LIII

Early in August, 1918, I made an inspection tour of the service of supply, to note the progress and acquaint myself, the chief of staff and General Harbord, by actual observations, with conditions.

The tour was made also with a view to such changes in personnel and improvements in methods as would insure complete fulfillment of the increased obligations imposed upon the service of supply by the tremendous task of receiving, storing and transporting the enlarged troop and supply shipments.

Our first stop was Tours, which, being the location of the headquarters of the S. O. S., with a huge American military garrison of 2,400 officers and 4,300 men, had become a beehive of activity.

We visited every activity at Tours, beginning with the central records office, a branch of the adjutant general's office of large proportions, where the personal records of every man in the A. E. F. were kept. We found that the railway operators, numbering thousands, comfortably situated in portable barracks at Camp de Grasse, were putting every energy into the service. Certain engineer troops were kept at this central point for railway work, ready to respond to calls from any direction. The well-managed camp of German prisoners, under Colonel Groocoe of the military police, contained several hundred men used as laborers.

A number of British women, known as the Women's Auxiliary Aid corps, were lent to us by their government to assist in clerical work. The 250 women located at Tours occupied neat and comfortable temporary barracks and presented a very military appearance on parade. Some fifty of them were ill in quarters at the time and I gave instructions that they should be transferred to our hospital. Besides officially, these fine women, under the proper restrictions that prevailed, became a valued addition to the social side of life where they were stationed. This force with us eventually numbered about 5,000.

Speaks to Men in Hospital.

The base hospital at Tours was then filled with men wounded in the recent engagements. They were receiving the best of care under Col. A. M. Smith and his efficient group of medical officers and nurses.

Passing through the various wards of this hospital I spoke to a fine-looking young soldier who was sitting up in bed, and asked him where he was wounded, meaning to inquire the nature of his wound.

Serving a Field Gun.

In reply he said: "Do you remember, sir, just where the road skirts a small grove and turns to the left across a wheatfield and then leads up over the brow of the hill? Well, right there, sir."

He was clearly describing the advance south of Soissons which pierced the Chateau Thierry salient. Of course, I was not there at the time, but it touched me that he should feel that I must have been very close to him.

At the base hospital in Bordeaux, then under the efficient supervision of Col. H. A. Shaw, chief surgeon of the base section, we found about 500 of our wounded, most of them soon to be sent home. No matter how severely wounded they were I never heard a word of complaint from any of our men. There could not have been found in the hospitals of any army a more cheerful lot. It was a lesson in fortitude, an inspiration, to see their fine courage. Some would never again see, others would never be able to walk again, but they all seemed proud of their sacrifice, which many of their countrymen are often prone to forget all too soon.

We arrived at Brest August 2 and found the commanding general, G. H. Harries, and staff at the station to meet us. Base section No. 5 was built around Brest, our leading port of debarkation. The section included four French territorial departments. Another landing port for troops was Cherbourg. A large locomotive terminal and repair shop were located at Rennes and a coal port at Granville.

Major O'Neill's Secret.

After an inspection of the storehouses and the construction for additional storage on the piers, I asked for the chief stevedore, Major O'Neill, who came up apparently quite embarrassed.

To put him at ease I took him by the arm and we walked together to where some lighters were being unloaded. As the port had made the record of handling 42,000 arriving troops and their baggage in one day, May 24, entirely with lighters, I asked him to tell me about it.

By this time he had overcome his fright, and pointing to two officers, each down in the bottom of a lighter directing the work, he said:

"Sir, do you see those two captains down there in their shirt sleeves? Well, that's the secret. I say to them: 'Don't stand off somewhere and puff yourselves up in your uniforms, but take off Sam Brownes and your coats and get down close to your men.'"

"Of course, those captains have now become experts. I did the same thing when I started, but since they are trained I manage things generally and they carry out my orders. I can wear my uniform now that I have won the right to wear it."

"Well," I said, "O'Neill, you're just the man I have been looking for, and I am going to send you to every port we use to show them your secret."

CHAPTER LIV

The French government had expressed a desire to bestow their decorations on American officers and men, and asked if I would accept an appointment in the Legion of Honor with the grade of grand officer.

As congress had recently granted permission for members of our forces to receive foreign decorations, the French government was advised accordingly, and it was to confer this honor upon me that President Poincaré paid his brief visit to Chaumont August 6, 1918.

I met him at the station with a military escort and conducted him to my headquarters, where the senior officers of the staff were present. After that formality we repaired to the small area of barracks, where the headquarters troop and band were drawn up in line for the ceremony.

I was not insensible to the high personal honor, but regarded it mainly as an appreciation on the part of the French government of the assistance America had already given to the cause.

Pershing Takes Command.

As the American army was now an accomplished fact, it seemed advisable to begin preparations immediately to carry out the plan of campaign adopted July 24, providing for a distinctive American operation against the St. Mihiel salient.

I motored to Sarcus August 9, and after discussing with Marshal Foch the changed situation in the Marne sector and the practical stabilization of the front on the Vesle, I suggested the transfer of the First army headquarters to the St. Mihiel region, where it could begin immediate preparations for the proposed offensive. We considered the outline of my plans and without hesitation Marshal Foch acquiesced in the transfer.

Returning to Paris the same afternoon I went to Provins to talk the matter over further with General Petain. We took stock of available divisions for the St. Mihiel operation, and he said I could count on him definitely to do everything in his power to furnish whatever we might require.

Having thus reached a general understanding regarding the preliminary details of the move, I drove the following morning to La Ferte-sous-Jouarre to take formal command of the First army and to give instructions to my staff regarding the movement of headquarters to Neufchateau.
